

Alabama Hills interpretive hikes shed light on area

Trek topics include geography, natural history and film history

Register Staff

Have you found yourself hiking through the corridors and crags of the Alabama Hills in awe, wondering how this dramatic landscape came to be? Why does this ancient landscape, nestled in the Sierra Nevada foothills, look so different from the Sierra Nevada? Haven't I seen this exact setting in "Django Unchained"?

The answers to these questions are available through free interpretive hikes open to the public on weekends through the winter. Hike topics include geology, natural history and film history.

Explore the mysteries hidden within the eroded granite rock while walking through the passageways and along the ridge lines that make up the maze of this amazing setting. Hear geological and cultural tales about this landscape that captures the stories of the ages. Learn interesting and amusing insights into numerous film and commercial productions set here, including "Gunga Din," "Tremors" and "Iron Man." Hikers meet the Interpretive Guide at the Eastern Sierra Visitor Center in Lone Pine at 10 a.m. and carpool when possible to the respective trailhead. Including drive time, tours take approximately two hours.

Eastern Sierra Interpretive Association (ESIA), Bureau of Land Management and the Alabama Hills Stewardship Group have partnered to offer these hikes. The full schedule can be found at <https://sierraforever.org/interpretive-hikes>. For more information, contact Dave Kirk, Bureau of Land Management, (760) 872-5000, or John Kelly, Eastern Sierra Interpretive Association, at (760) 872-1220 or john@esiaonline.org.

Manzanar artist

Artist Topah Spoonhunter, pictured here with Bernadette Johnson, superintendent of the Manzanar National Historic Site, middle, and Fatima Khan, Manzanar's community volunteer ambassador, on Saturday, gave a talk about his new exhibit currently being displayed on Manzanar's gallery wall. Spoonhunter is an enrolled member of the Northern Arapaho Tribe and grew up on the Big Pine Paiute Reservation. He is a self-taught artist and designer who is always looking for new challenges. Being a descendant of the Paiute and Arapaho tribes, one of his greatest sources of inspiration has been his culture. Spoonhunter's exhibit will run through Jan. 31, 2020, at Manzanar. Manzanar is located between Independence and Lone Pine on U.S. Highway 395.
